SILENT KNIGHT SEMINARS TO EDUCATE ON EMERGENCY COMMUNICATION & FIRE ALARM SYSTEMS

FREE Seminars Covering Codes, Diverse Technologies & Best Practices to Offer AIA, CEU and SPD Credits

NORTHFORD, Conn., March 13, 2012 – Silent Knight by Honeywell (NYSE: HON) is sponsoring a series of free seminars to cover current fire alarm and ECS (Emergency Communication Systems) requirements, plus the various methods and technologies available to meet those mandates. The New Fire & Emergency Communication Code Seminars are designed to educate architects, engineers, code enforcement officials and facility owners/managers on the latest, code-compliant fire alarm and ECS solutions for various facilities that offer extraordinary protection and value. All attendees will receive a certificate, qualifying them for 4 AIA (American Institute of Architects), 0.4 CEU (Continuing Education Unit) and 4.0 Continuing Professional Development (CPD) credits.

The newest requirements on fire alarm circuitry, mass notification and facility risk analysis, as outlined in the current NFPA 72: National Fire Alarm & Signaling Code, will be presented by guest speaker Raymond A. Grill, P.E., FSFPE, president of the Society of Fire Protection Engineers and member of the NFPA (National Fire Protection Association) Technical Correlating Committee of NFPA 72. Grill will discuss the codes' intent and outline an approach for conducting a code-required risk analysis.

Silent Knight will demonstrate the functionality of a combined fire alarm and emergency communications solution, outlining the ease of maintenance and cost-savings benefits of a single, integrated system. The Farenhyt ECS \(Emergency Communications System\) line integrates mass notification capabilities with Silent Knight's proven fire alarm technology to create one completely supervised system that meets the latest NFPA 72, UL 2572 and Department of Defense (DoD) standards.

Guidance on ECS intelligibility design and testing will be covered, in addition to the latest gas detection and notification requirements and technologies suited to the needs of virtually every commercial facility.
